Pope and Lee--A Contrast.
A correspondent of the Cincinnati Enquirer contributes the two following anecdotes:

Two little incidents in the history of General Pope, of the Federal Army, and General Lee, of the Confederate, very forcibly illustrate the difference in the character of the two men, one of the Army of the Potomac, and the other of the Army of Northern Virginia. The story of the former was related by an attaché of Gen. Pope, and that of the latter by a surgeon in the Confederate army.

While General Pope, attired in a gorgeous suit of uniform, and with hat in hand, was walking not far from his quarters, he was accosted by a small man dressed in a plain suit of black:

"This is General Pope, I believe," said the civilian.
"Pope is my name sir," and after casting a hasty eye at the man, who at the stranger, whom he regarded as a country farmer come to ask some favor.

"I wish to see General Pope on business," said the civilian.
"Go to my Adjutant," said General Pope, turning on his heel, and regarding the stranger with a haughty stare, continued his walk. The stranger, however, did not move, but gathered near General Pope, again addressed himself to General Pope.

"My business is private, and I wish to see General Pope alone."
"Pope is my name sir," exclaimed General Pope, in a haughty tone, and turned indignantly away.
Twice thwarted, the stranger entered the Adjutant General's office, and made an apology to the Secretary, which was waived by the latter.

On the 30th of June, 1862, during the great battles around Richmond, and at the very moment the bloody assault on General Lee's position at McClellan's position on Malvern Hill, a solitary horseman, some distance from the scene of action, had dismounted under a cluster of trees, and was apparently listening to the sound of artillery. This elevation had been selected by a surgeon of one of the corps for a field hospital, and so terrible was the conflict at Malvern Hill, that all the soldiers of the Union pronounced it a rather hazardous manner to move out of the way.

"Certainly, gentleman," replied the stranger, "the wounded should be kindly cared for," and shifted his position.

In a very few minutes a courier dashed up and enquired for General Lee.

"Here he is, sir--move quickly!" The surgeon was thunderstruck, and hastened to offer apologies, which General Lee readily accepted, mounted his horse and galloped to the front.

Practical Application of Radical Policy.

It is reported that a gentleman, a Democrat, living in the southern portion of this country, being desirous of illustrating the benefits of Radicalism, and to surprise a number of his votaries and advocates, invited a certain Radical to his house to stay over night with him, and at the same time invited a "man and brother" to pass the night under his hospitable roof.

Pleasant.
To be an editor. If you let everything go as it happens, you are a wooden man. If you attempt to do your duty, you are trying to rule the country. You are abused for not publishing any news, and then you are abused when you do publish the news. People will take offense if you notice them in your paper, or if you don't--so you never know whether you are to meet a man as you parted with him or not.

Your party demands the most implicit allegiance, and on election day when your prestige, which is your all, is at stake, it heedlessly or purposely abstains from voting, and allows you to be beaten to death.

If you are neutral on politics you are of no account to anybody. You can't support one party never so cautiously, and high minded without being denounced as all that is mean by the other.

If you admit that your political opponents are men, acting from as sincere and conscientious motives as your own, you are in the market for their votes. That you can have more than a mercenary or selfish motive, even in your prayer, is scouted.

Your editorials are termed scurrilous by your enemies and tame by your friends. You are not, and if you paper isn't spicy, and your paper isn't it to be received into a decent family it is spiced. If you should take no kind of every snapping at your back, the contrary, you would be a blackguard and an idiot in the barroom. Moreover you would soon be food for worms, for you would have a fight on hand every hour in the day, and an assassin like attack at least once every night. It is well for the editors and the devil in hell that there is a great deal of us.

The Mixture of Races.
Agassiz, in his lately published work on Brazil, has the following on the mixture of races: "Let any one who doubts the evil of this mixture philanthropy to break down the barriers between the white and the negro. He cannot deny the deterioration consequent upon an amalgamation of races more widespread here than in any other country in the world, and which is rapidly effecting the best qualities of the white man, the negro and the Indian, leaving a mongrel non-descript type, deficient in physical and mental energy. At a time when the new social status of the negro is a subject of vital importance in our statesmanship, we should profit by the experience of a country where, though slavery exists, there is far more liberty towards the negro than has ever enjoyed in the United States. Let us learn the double lesson; open all the advantages of education to the negro, and give him every chance of success which culture gives to the man who knows how to use it; but respect the laws of nature, and let all our dealings which the black man tend to preserve, as far as possible, the distinctness of his national characteristics, and the integrity of our own."

From Latrobe's "Sketches of America."
The First Steamboat.
In October, 1811, the greatest event of the Western country took place-- This was the commencement of steamboat navigation. Fulton's steamboat, called the "New Orleans," was launched at the above date, and late at night on the fourth day after starting, she arrived at Louisville, having been at seventy hours in descending the river.

The novel appearance of the vessel, and the rapidity with which it made its passage over the broad reaches of the river, excited a mixture of terror and surprise among many of the settlers, whom the rumor of such an invention had never reached; and it is related that on an unexpected arrival of the boat before the mouth of the river, the people of the night, the extraordinary sound which filled the air as the steamboat was suffered to escape from the valves on rounding to, produced a general alarm, and multitudes in the street and those on the banks ascertained the cause. He had heard it said that the general impression among the Kentuckians was, that a comet had fallen into the Ohio.

CURE FOR BALD-HEADNESS.
Frederick Kemp writes from the silver mines of Montana to the Herald of Health, giving the following hint in reference to a cure for baldness:
"A friend of mine who had the misfortune to be bald-headed, knowing that there is a wonderful invigorating power in the sun's rays, last spring threw away his hairbrush, and shaved his head every day, summer, and fall bareheaded, and also for the first few days of mid-day. For a few days the rays of the hot sun on his head were almost unbearable, but after that time he experienced no unpleasantness whatever. The result was that in the fall he had a good head of hair. And in this experiment he was not alone--several of his acquaintances had the same plan, they were all fortunate enough to experience the same result." The editor adds that a similar case once came under his observation, and he has no doubt to doubt that "the exposure of the skin to air and sunshine, under the proper circumstances, stimulates it to a healthy action, and with it those glands upon which the growth of the hair depends."

CAUSES AND CURE OF HOOD CHOLE-RA. A correspondent of the Louisville Courier gives the following as his experience on the above subject:
"By examination of many carcasses after death I find they contain an incredible number of worms, as also an incredible number of lice on the body. After making this discovery I experimented as to how the lice and worms could be exterminated in proper time to prevent an attack of cholera. The lice were easy to drive with coal oil. And to kill the worms I used a solution of carbolic acid. I in hot water until I made the liquor very strong. I then mixed carbolic acid and the worms before the cholera was set up in the system."

GENERAL WILLIAM H. CARROLL, formerly a prominent Tennessee politician, and son of Governor Carroll, died recently in Canada. He was a Brigadier General in the Confederate army, and before the war terminated went to Canada, where he remained in exile until his death.

A CALIFORNIAN is letting out his experience by "degrees." He compares "mine" Positive mine, comparative mine, superlative mine!"

Rejected.
Kiss me, though you make believe-- Kiss me, though I am not true-- You are kissing to deceive-- Let the tide a moment flow-- Back with me to love and to me-- And bear in down--for pity's sake!

Give me of your flowers, one leaf-- Give me of your smiles, one smile-- Dark about me, and all that is green-- Just a moment, though the while I should feel, and almost know, You are jesting with my woe!

Whisper to me sweet and low-- Tell me how you stand and weave--
Dark about me, and all that is green-- Just a moment, though I know It is only a moment, though I know Just a moment--though
